

State Level Workshop on Hospital Emergency Preparedness - 2018

Hospital Emergencies, crises and disasters have become more frequent during recent decades. Many lives could be saved if better prepared, with an organized scalable response system already in place. The common gaps in health system preparedness around the world are generally well understood, but they are often not addressed in a comprehensive and systematic way. In particular, many hospitals have not yet developed Hospital Emergency Protocol and Mass Casualty Management Plans.

Disaster preparedness planning increasingly emphasizes building capacity of human, organizational and infrastructural sectors. Apollo hospitals with 35 years of experience managed various types of emergencies and mass casualty situations. The Apollo Specialty hospitals at Ayanambakkam with 250 beds and Apollo College of Nursing within the campus preparing upto Ph.D level nurses is on the front line with full strength to treating any emergencies and mass casualty situations.

The technological advancements have made the job of health professional to evolve continuously. In the past few years, several changes have been made in the methods of mass casualty management and the hospital Emergency preparedness for disasters. Therefore, it is the responsibility of every health professional to remain updated with the ongoing changes. In view of the same Apollo college of nursing has planned two days workshop with drills on hospital emergency codes and external disaster drills from State fire service department and National Disaster Response Force. The nursing faculty and students are invited to get updated!
